Cookies

In accordance with provisions of § 89 of the Act no. 127/2005 on electronic communication of the Collection of Laws of the Czech republic, we hereby inform you that our web-sites (servers) use cookies.

What are the cookie files and what are they used for?

These are short text files that a website sends into a browser. That way, it enables the web to record information about your visit. When you visit the web again, the browser sends stored cookies back to the server which thus retrieves all the information about you it has stored during your last visit. Almost each website in the world uses cookies.

The cookies thus enable to store specific information on previous visit of a user. It allows prefilling of the form data or direct selection of your preferred language and other settings. Web browsing and using of its functions is thus simpler, more productive and user friendlier. The cookies make web browsing much easier, they adjust the web to your needs and improve user friendliness of the websites. The cookies facilitate personalization. They also enable targeting of the advertising displayed on the web.

The cookies occupy almost no space on your hard drive and are not used for retrieval of any sensitive personal data or for identification of you as a particular person.

Types of the cookie files

The cookie files are temporary and permanent. The temporary files are stored on your computer only during viewing of a website. After browser window is closed, these temporary files are deleted. Permanent cookie files are stored in your computer for a longer time. They help us to identify on next visit of the web, to adjust the site to your interests etc. They do not enable determination of your identity in any way.

Cookie file management

First of all, we would like to inform you that common internet browsers usually enable management of the cookies. You can thus delete, block or restrict use of cookies in the settings of your browser, either for specific websites or in general. You can find more detailed information in your browser's help.

If your browser is enabled to use cookies, we assume that you agree with use of cookies by us. If you do not agree with their use, please change your browser's settings.
